The Bodily Intrusiveness Scale is a 57-item self-report inventory which assesses early adolescent beliefs associated with sexual consent negotiation. Individuals are asked to respond how much they agree with statements about consent using a 7-pt Likert scale (1=Agree, 7= Disagree). The items include statements about the legality of sexual consent negotiation, the influence of relationship commitment on consent, general attitudes towards consent, and the importance of establishing consent before different types of sexual activity (e.g. kissing vs over the clothes touching).
